

COMICS AND MAGAZINES FOR CHILDREN (3–16)

Magazines/newspapers on display next to entrance to school library entrance near issue desk. Catch the eye/ browse in queue/accessible/equal value to books. Also on tables in library to browse. Important they are seen as possible reading choice for all.

@ALibrarylady

Run clubs for children who enjoy reading and writing non-fiction, news reports and creating comic strips.

@EggyHelen

Also the interactive bit where you can cut it up sometimes to make other things like board games, masks etc.. Love the craft element. My kids like to cut magazines up to make scrap books/mood boards. Seeds catalogues are also good for this.

@RS_Hargreaves

I used to ensure my classroom library was co-constructed with the children in my class. Children were invited to contribute to our library if they wanted to. They would often bring in comics from home

@lit4pleasure

I think comics and mags also offer a chance to assert identity and connect with peer culture and hobbies. A way to be yourself and also share who you are with others. Powerful!

@eduHelenHendry

Comics and mags are both very social and very private. Groups will crowd around one mag, but also I get the impression that sometimes it gives the reader a chance NOT to share what they're reading and keep it private.
